Outpouring of Local Charity

For Katrina Victims

ADVOCATING SCREENINGS...Michael and Lauren Hammer of Westfield are the local advocates that they helped save their son, Evan’s life.

For the hammer family, that meant another medical emergency with their three-year-old daughter, Alexis. Mr. Hammer works long hours, often leaving his wife, Mrs. Hammer, to go online and read stories about other parents who are dealing with eating disorders.

One year ago, Evan was diagnosed with a rare condition called SCAD. The condition, which stands for sudden coronary artery dissection, could be fatal and can have a variety of symptoms. In Evan’s case, it caused him to become asymptomatic.

“I didn’t know that he had this, we didn’t know,” Mrs. Hammer said. “At one point, I think, I was at 18 months of age and I’m sitting in the car and I was just overcome by the thought of losing him.”

The hammer family was soon referred to Dr. Korson, a pediatrician at St. Barnabas Medical Center in Livingston.

“Dr. Korson really broke down what Evan was going through,” Mrs. Hammer said. “It’s not just his eating, it’s also his sleep and his mood and his energy.”

Dr. Korson recommended Evan attend a sleep study, but due to his age, the only place that would conduct the study is in New York City.

Due to town efforts, curbside pick up of bagged leaves will be picked up. The truck will be ready to go by Monday, October 3 and will be in service through Halloween.

Out of Katrina...Last year, several hundred volunteers and their families visited Gulf shores to assist in the rebuilding efforts. This year, the hammers are preparing to do the same, volunteering for a minimum of 30 hours to prepare for their vacation under the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s (FEMA) National建成后.

Mayor Skibitsky said that he is prepared to visit the site, volunteering for a minimum of 30 hours to prepare for their vacation under the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s (FEMA) National建成后.

It is expected that other personnel will be dispatched for a massive-scale operation on the Gulf Coast region due to the devastation caused by the hurricane.
